RU Talk: Curatorial Peer Learning Group: Curating as Public Service

A Curatorial Peer Learning Group where curators, writers, educators and other practitioners were invited to share ideas and think collectively on their own practice and the challenges it is facing today. This meeting titled Curating as Public Service was hosted by Or Tshuva who talked about civil service as a useful entry point from which to think about the role of curators in public museums today. She presented some of her recent curatorial projects working with museum collections and site specific commissions, and discussed the production of museal counter readings in the process of becoming more transparent, inclusive and self-critical institutions.

RU Exhibition: There's An Alligator On The Second Floor

With the installation "There's An Alligator On The Second Floor," Melanie Windl reflects on current biological adaptation strategies of flora and fauna to changing temperatures. Using analog material and digital technology, her work designs a formal-aesthetic utopia of post-anthropocene species. The artist developed a new recipe for a plant-based biopolymer as a sculptural material for the objects in the installation. The self-produced, fully biodegradable and non-toxic bio-plastic poetically references the self-empowerment of the individual through the use of readily available alternative methods and strategies.

2022 Voices of Multiplicity (VoM) Artist Residency Program

Launched on February 7th, this three-month program provides a learning space for artists to gain cross-disciplinary competencies in social practice through the exploration of three interlinked fields: Restorative Justice (Repair, Mediate, Transform), Wellness Justice (Mental health stigma & awareness), Eco Justice (soil, air and water).

For this first edition of VoM, we welcome four New York based artists, Trasonia Abbott, Adalky F. Capellán, Marissa A. Gutierrez-Vicario and Ibtisam Tasnim Zaman, who were recommended by a group of experts. These artists identify as BIPOC and their respective practices are intrinsically connected to community engagement and social justice activism.

RU Talk: Meet Over Lunch: Of Animacy Reading Group by Nella Aarne

Of Animacy Reading Group, hosted by RU's curator-in-residence Nella Aarne, convenes online to discuss Maggie Nelson's essay 'Art Song' in Nelson's latest book, On Freedom: Four Songs of Care and Constraint.

'Art Song' enquires into how the aesthetics of care have been deployed in – and developed into a prominent political facet of – contemporary art practice. Drawing from psychoanalysis, queer theory, current political debates and a selection of case studies, Nelson asks whether it is possible, or fruitful, for art to always primarily care, heal and repair.

Tracing the Hidden Memories presents the pop-up exhibition Bookmarks featuring new work by the Bulgarian artist-in-residence Maria Nalbantova, and a discussion with RU Program Manager and curator Maryam Ghoreishi focused on Nalbantova's practice and her notion of collecting.

Over the course of her residency, Nalbantova compiled bookmarks that she was able to access at book-sharing boxes in New York through the Free Little Library network (an organization that promotes neighborhood book exchanges). This new series of works will be exhibited at RU for the pop up show on April 21.

RU Exhibition: Open Studio: Nadra Jacob

Chilean born artist Nadra Jacob presents new works realized over the course of her three month residency at RU in partnership with Artists Alliance Inc Studio programs. Rendered in oil, paper and embroidery, these compositions move between abstraction and figuration. Their layered imagery is expressive of Jacob's life long interest in the power of numbers as a foundation of everything that exists in the Universe and incessant experimentation that she applies in her works — most recently introducing cyanotype on canvas and paper and perfecting her embroidery and encaustic skills.

The artist will engage in a discussion about her practice with RU guest curator Luciana Solano. Their exchanges will be recorded and made available online.

The program aims to offer time and space for gentle exercises in relearning how to be together in the aftermath of the pandemic.

On May 5th, RU will host an Exercises in Togetherness event with contributions by Helsinki-based artist Laura Cemin and Brooklyn-based artist and writer Gordon Hall.

RU Open Studio: Recent works by Adrián Fernández

For this open studio, Adrián Fernández has chosen to display photographs from the Pending Memories series alongside a very recent body of sculptures titled Incomplete Monument that are shown for the first time. The resulting installation features black and white photographs of urban and rural landscapes that are in close dialogue with sculptural counterparts fabricated in Corten steel. The center of the photographic images are occupied by metallic structures of different scales that seem to have been abandoned. Whereas their purpose is unknown, the camera documents the location of these constructions as an archaeological site, leading the viewer to wonder about the possible motives that led to their existence.

RU Exhibition: Between the MA and the Lines

The Japanese concept of Ma refers to the in-between spaces. It could be a physical or emotional space between people, the compositional distance between elements, an interval, an emptiness, or a pause in time.

Between the MA and the Lines is a dialogical conversation between Atalya Laufer, a Berlin based multi-disciplinary artist currently in residency at RU and the Guest curator Ayelet Danielle Aldouby. Their exchange will focus on Laufer's recent works on paper, on view in the space. They take as their point of departure drawings made by her four year old daughter which the artist then redraws and collages.

Reiki-healer's Wife and her Garden Party is a site-specific installation by the Slovak RU artist Ěv van Hettmer. Executed with rope, carabiners and painted cardboard, this new work investigates topics of vulnerability and femininity. It is conceived in dialogue with the outside garden as a possible feminist strategy emanating from the meta-dystopian world of Alice in Wonderland where festivity (celebration), psychoanalysis and self-reflection are brought together.

Ibtisam Tasnim Zaman is currently working on the project "Through Our Own Eyes: Divine Feminine Fables" that connects the stories of BIPOC women and queer individuals through a series of intimate portrait sessions and interviews painted and lead by the artist.

The future of the past is the present features new works by the Hungarian artists Ádám Albert and Marton Nemes.

Looking at cultural-intellectual transmissions that traverse historical time and geographical space, Ádám Albert creates a site-specific installation with sculptures from the collection of the American Hungarian Library which were originally exhibited at the Hungarian Pavilion at the New York World's Fair in 1939.

The 'Meta Paintings' series by Marton Nemes point to the place where society now exists, between the physical and digital space.

This will be the 3rd variation of "4D flag" since starting this project with Cook, and the first time installing it outside, allowing the work to come alive with sunlight and wind. Whittle's flags dig into the idea of teamwork by exploring her 25 active collaboration languages through her visual and creative choices. Sddie Choua will present a series of films, and she invites the viewer to discover the literary work of Saida Menebhi. The artist also shares with us her recipes against racism. Racialised people and people from migrant backgrounds often suffer from health problems that are caused by the stress and trauma of racism and discrimination. The recipes are brought by the image of Yma Sumac, a Peruvian singer who became a world star in the fifties, but who was also exoticised as 'the Inca princess' who sang folkloric Quechua songs to a white public. Visitors are welcome to talk about their experience and remedies in an intimate conversation with Sddie.

RU Exhibition: Open Studio: Recent Work by Ariel Cabrera Montejo

Raised in Cuba, Ariel Cabrera Montejo was surrounded by historical memorabilia, collectibles and artworks. Early on in his artistic career, Cabrera chose to adopt traditional painting techniques and was influenced by pictorial references ranging from Impressionism to the Spanish, Italian and American schools of painting which had marked Cuban art during the colonial period. Cabrera infuses new meaning in his images by depicting actions and narratives that propose an alternative to Cuba's mainstream history and legitimize its population in a different way.

RU is pleased to introduce 2022 resident artists Fatlum Doçi, Eduardo Lozano, Brilant Milazimi and Lisa Strassberg.

Artist residencies are generally thought of as spaces for personal development. Yet to enter an artist residency can be like migrating into a no man's land where artists with a wide range of practices—at times diametrically opposed—are expected to immerse themselves within a pre-determined group setting. The impetus behind this group show stems from a collaborative approach where four artists from very different cultural backgrounds are looking at and selecting each other's work.

An ongoing multi-dimensional enterprise by Elena Chermerska as an attempt to revitalize the monumental complex "A Monument to Freedom" in Kochani, North Macedonia. The monument was built by Gligor Chemerski (Elena's father who was also an artist) and the architect Radovan Radjenovic. Over time, the monument with its integrated amphitheater transformed into a public space for community building, but with the dissolution of Yugoslavia in 1991, it gradually fell into a deep state of neglect which subsequently prompted Elena to take action to revive the monument.

The project consists of an installation combining archives, painted surfaces and video works (2019); an ongoing documentary film production (2021-ongoing); on-site performance.
