The future of the past is the present

July 13 - 15, 2022 | 4:00 - 7:00 PM

American Hungarian Library and Historical Society
215 East 82nd Street, New York, NY 10028

The future of the past is the present features new works by the Hungarian artists Ádám Albert and Marton Nemes.

Looking at cultural-intellectual transmissions that traverse historical time and geographical space, Ádám Albert creates a site-specific installation with sculptures from the collection of the American Hungarian Library which were originally exhibited at the Hungarian Pavilion at the New York World's Fair in 1939. Through this gesture of appropriation, Albert transforms these elements to create a poetic story of the power relations unfolding on the eve of the Second World War with the intention of linking the meaning of these objects to a popular and historical understanding.

The 'Meta Paintings' series by Marton Nemes point to the place where society now exists, between the physical and digital space. The sensation that we experience how the Metaverse creates a duplicated, alternative reality looked through a real world computer screen is similar how the artist opens a window on the body of the painting to the mirrored bottom, where we can see everything reversed. The "Meta Paintings" are like the rabbit hole, through a jungle of laser cut, vibrantly painted closeups of brushstrokes where the viewer can reach Wonderland, without really knowing yet what future awaits us.

Following the opening of the exhibition The future of the past is the present at the American Hungarian Library and Historical Society in New York, RU artist Ádám Albert and RU Guest Curator Adriana Blidaru will discuss Ádám's newest body of work and how this ties into his broader research.

In his installation, Ádám creates three new artworks inspired by objects that were originally selected in 1939 to represent the Hungarian Pavilion at the New York World's Fair: "World of Tomorrow" and then incorporated in the collection of the American Hungarian Library. These works reflect upon the impact of the World's Fair on the power relations that unfolded during the Second World War, and are linked to an ideological and historical understanding of nation-state building through visual culture.

Ádám and Adriana's dialogue will touch upon the history and significance of the New York World's Fair, the artist's own experience in New York, and how this plays out in his current exhibition at the American Hungarian Library, as well as in his extensive research-based practice.
