4D Flag by Lindsey Whittle

An ongoing project with Cincinnati artist Benjamin Cook, featuring a digital flag by Loraine Wible. Whittle and Cook explore how to communicate through interactive flags. Whittle's flags dig into the idea of teamwork by exploring her 25 active collaboration languages through her visual and creative choices. Whittle and Cook have strong interests in exploring color, layer, shape and collaboration.

At Governors Island, Whittle performed experiments during the first 15 minutes of each hour on July 23, 2022, from 12-6pm (6 experiments total). At 2 pm, mini flags were distributed as part of the performance.

"Exposed to The Air, to View/Not Covered" by Anissa R. Lewis

A continuation and re-imagination of her "Love Letter Yard Signs" as light projections. A work-in-progress, these projections of open and lost spaces, lost histories, are brought together with signage that dictate how we once interacted with, "valued" and navigated these same spaces. Lastly, texts and quotes from bell hooks and James Baldwin are introduced to spur an urgency for reclamation and renewal of connection with these spaces and places.
