Performance lies at the center of Boryana Petkova's practice. Her work is guided by the desire to overcome the lethargy caused by self-imposed limits. She imagines and creates links, at times even a symbiosis (although sometimes ephemeral) between opposing elements. Its main purpose is to connect different spaces, peoples and ideas.

"There are moments," writes Michel Foucault, "where the question of knowing if one can think otherwise than one thinks and see otherwise than one sees is indispensable" Metaphor-mosis brings together four local and international artists participating in Residency Unlimited's Brooklyn based Artist in Residency program. Their work, largely created during their time in residency, explores hidden processes of micro-transformation through which new approaches to seeing and new systems of meaning can emerge.

For this open studio, Rafael Villares will present a series of drawings on paper, artist books, and installations as part of his ongoing research on the definition and representation of Nature and the landscape. In Villares' work, the landscape is an ambiguous and constantly evolving concept, which explains why his pieces regularly reveal various ways of perceiving and experiencing Nature. Although his creative process involves a research-based practice, often resulting from collaborations with scientists and academics, Villares emphasizes the importance of viewers being aware of their own vision and creative capacity when engaging with the artworks.
